

Abstract

The present invention relates to the domain of toughened glass bodies, comprising a base body made of glass and at least one layer applied thereto.

According to the invention at least one layer is under a defined compressive stress or under a defined tensile stress.